Think Before You Twitter

By Grace Martin

How is your "thoughtfulness quotient?"

Are you the one who insists on asking your neighbor, every time you see her, whether she has had word from the son who is fighting for his country in the Pacific?

Maybe you insist on talking about your new clothes to the woman whose budget has been cut to ribbons by the war.

Or perhaps you are the woman who tunes the radio to its loudest pitch the night your husband is trying to untangle the problem of how he will pay the taxes.

When one of your friends loses a member of his family do you wear a black crepe expression every time you meet him for the next three months?

In view of how much difference a little courtesy of comment makes, it's surprising how little trouble it takes.
